Australian Government

Since Southern Youth and Family Services in Illawarra and Miller in Sydney opened the first foyers in Australia in 2001, foyers have started to open in most Australian states and territories. Foyers provide up to two years accommodation and support for young people into education and employment.

Foyers provide a new way of working with young people to build and encourage their talents. Foyers are not just about education, accommodation and support; they are also about fundamentally changing the way we work with and view young people.
